

Updates for hw6b:

The sitemap is the same for the previous design in hw6a.

The websites have the following updates:

- 1) Delete the unnecessary navigation options, and make the font size of the texts in home page smaller.
- 2) Add links for the images and names of the products in the product page, so that the user can be led to the detail page through clicking on the image, the name and the detail button. (for the detail button, change it from a + button, which was not intuitive and misleading)
- 3) Delete the go to cart button and change the price according to different quantity the users choose.
- 4) Make the website responsive.

Other functionality are remained the same.

Screenshots:

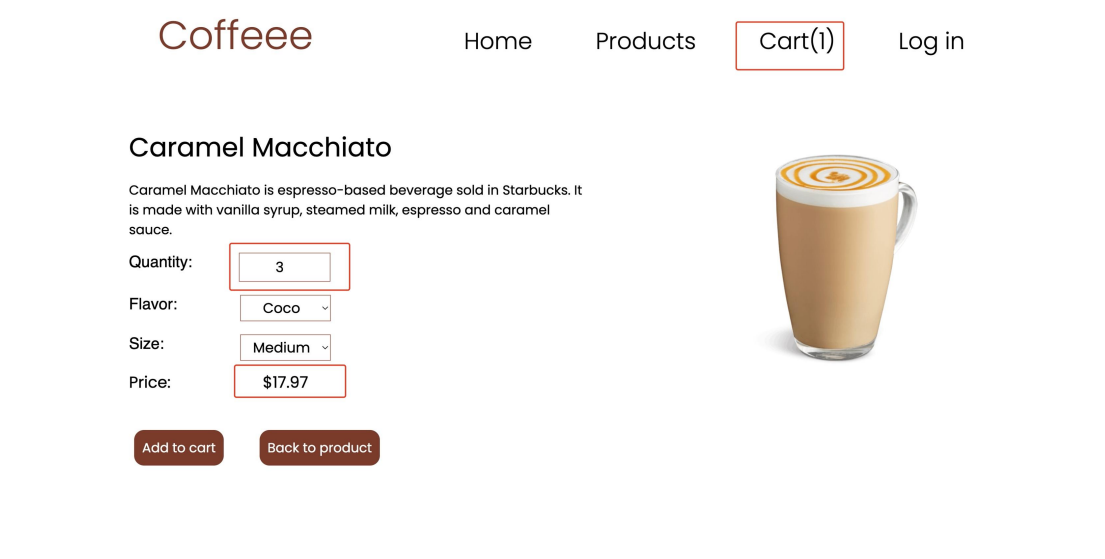

In the home page, click the “Get Started” button to get into the product page. Notice that in the Cart(0), 0 indicates that there is no product in the cart now.

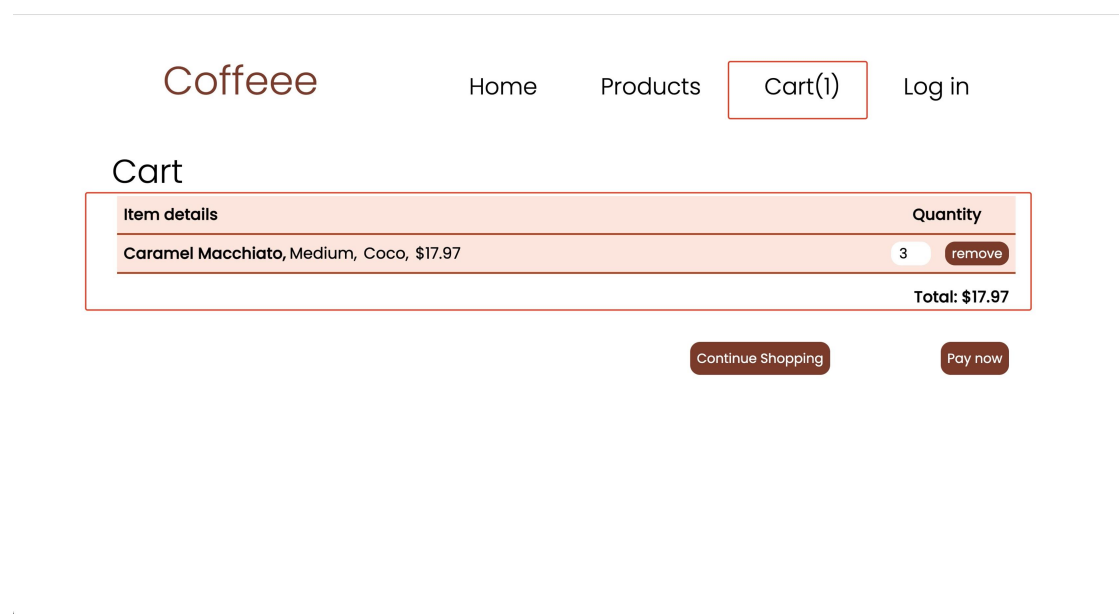

In the product page, click the Image/name/detail button to go to the detail page.

In the detail page, there are different options for the user.

Since the user has the options to change the number/size/flavor. For example, if the user chooses 3/coco/medium, the price changes according to the quantity and if the user clicks the add to cart button, the cart number would change from Cart(0) to Cart(1). Click Cart(1) leads the user to cart page.

The user can remove the items as they want, say they remove the first item, then the total price is changing back to 0.
